York C.I. : Medical Facility of the Year

Warden Angel Quiros with members of the York C. I. Staff

The National Commission on Correctional Health Care, upon the recommendation of its Accreditation Committee, has selected the York Correctional Institution to receive this year's NCCHC Facility of the Year Award. This prestigious award is presented each year to only one facility selected from among the 500 prisons, jails

From The Commissioner

The agency recently held an all day Re-Entry Summit at the Maloney Center for Training and Staff Development to inform and gather ideas for the further enhancement of our efforts to assist in the successful reintegration of the offenders who are rejoining their communities. Our work in this regard so far has been exemplary and has allowed us to manage our offender population to an extent that other states have not been able to achieve. The keynote speaker of the event was Ira Barbell, Ph.D. of the Annie E. Casey Foundation, which has done significant work in the area of the effect of incarceration on the community. He summed up the current state of corrections in America as being, "...in the midst of an unprecedented ground swell of change." He stated that this was due in large part to the continuing expansion of the U.S. prison population. "The United States has five percent of the world's population and 25 percent of those incarcerated and we are the only industrialized nation still using incarceration as the primary means of dealing with crime," he stated. He also complimented our agency as being "light years" ahead of others.

While we should be very proud of where we are, there is still work to be done. With an eye toward the potential assistance of the Federal Second Chance Act, I told the Summit that we will be moving toward the creation of a statewide re-entry strategy. We already have the foundation for this in our Offender Management Plan and in the re-entry preparation that we now provide departing offenders. But still, more than half of our discharging offenders leave us end of sentence. We must do better, and we will. The Summit was extremely positive and full of pride over what we have accomplished. Above all it demonstrated that we have and will continue to hold true to the standard that we set for ourselves when we enhanced our mission for re-entry. We have shown that the foundation of facility good order and security supports our efforts or re-entry and enhances

A License for Success

recently, but these were not your standard CAPI photo. Instead these were driver's license and identification photos taken as part of a new collaborative effort between the Connecticut Departments of Correction and Motor Vehicles. The program is intended to support the DOC's re-entry mission by insuring that offenders who are rejoining law abiding society have an appropriate form of identification that is needed for such things as opening a bank account, cashing a check and renting an apartment. Of the first dozen offenders through the program, 10 received a state identification card, which looks much like a driver's license. Two other offenders, both near the end of their sentence, were able to renew their commercial driver's licenses, allow them to begin working as soon as they are released. The portable license machine operated by DMV staff will be utilized throughout the agency.

DOC Dials Up Video Conferencing

Across the state inmates are attending court cases, parole and immigration hearings, all without ever leaving the secure confines of their correctional facility. In keeping with our mission of public safety and in an era of $4 plus gasoline, the Connecticut Department of Correction is expanding its use of video conferencing.

Assistant Attorney General Steven Strom makes remarks in an inmate matter via video conferencing

Sitting before a television set with a small camera unit on top, the inmate sees and hears the judge or hearing panel just as the officials presiding in Rockville, Bridgeport, Waterbury or Hartford see and hear the inmate on the screen before them. Nearly all 18 correctional facilities have been set up for the video conferencing, which is being done in collaboration with the State Judicial Branch, the Board of Pardons and Paroles as well as the federal Immigration and Customs Enforcement Division. At this point, only civil court matters are being heard via the conferencing, but discussions continue as to how criminal matters might likewise be handled.

and juvenile detention and confinement facilities that participate in NCCHC's nationwide accreditation program.

"We are all incredibly proud of the York CI health care and custody staff who worked so hard to achieve and maintain the NCCHC accreditation," said Dr. Robert Trestman, Executive Director of Correctional Managed Health Care. "The fact that York was selected as the NCCHC 2008 Facility of the Year is a wonderful, and well-deserved, recognition of a team of professionals who demonstrate dedication, collaboration, and an ongoing commitment to excellence."

The accreditation surveyors and committee were impressed with how the staff at York C.I. consistently demonstrated excellence in health service delivery and correctional health care professionalism, and noted the variety of positive programs available to the population.

The award will be presented on October 20, 2008 in Chicago as part of the opening events of the NCCHC's National Conference on Correctional Health Care.

A Job for a Job Developer

As part of the Department's ongoing commitment to the successful re-integration of inmates back into the community, a "Job Developer" position was recently created. Elisabeth Cooper assumed the position of the new Job Developer in the Offender Programs and Victims Services unit at Central Office in January 2008.

DoC Job Developer Elisabeth Cooper

Her primary role is to cultivate working relationships with employers who are willing to provide employment opportunities to formerly incarcerated individuals. Ms. Cooper will act as a liaison between the Job Centers within the facilities and the DOC-contracted agencies out in the community that provide employment services, to better streamline the job search process. She is also working with Correctional Enterprises and Vocational Education programs such as Culinary Arts to create real career tracks to Connecticut employers throughout the state.

Prior to joining the DOC, Elisabeth Cooper was the Job Developer for STRIDE, a Department of Labor funded program at Quinebaug Valley Community College, working with female offenders at York Correctional in Niantic. In that role, she taught a ten-week pre-employment curriculum to prepare individuals for successful reintegration into the working community. Ms. Cooper graduated from Southern Connecticut State University with her BSW in Social Work and is near completion of a CJS (Criminal Justice Studies certificate) from U-Mass in Amherst. Her work experience includes time spent as a counselor for Boston's urban youth, a discharge planner at Windham Hospital, and a medical social worker for Community Health and Home Care in Northeast Connecticut.

The Week Went "Well"

After several months of planning, the Department of Correction's Wellness Committee kicked off the inaugural edition of "Wellness Week," at Central Office last month, and by all accounts it was a resounding success.

"The response has been tremendous," said Wanda White-Lewis amidst the overflow crowd for health screenings in Café 24. "It just proves that people are concerned about their health, and that there is a need for such activities."

During the course of the week, employees were afforded the opportunity to participate in a variety of activities ranging from, stress management seminars, mammogram screenings, cooking demonstrations, and retirement planning overviews.

Central Office Staff gather health-related information during recent Wellness Week activities

The genesis of Wellness Week began last year when Commissioner Lantz, concerned with the toll that stress takes on correctional staff, asked Director of Health Services Pat Ottolini (recently retired), and Health Services Program Director Wanda White-Lewis to form a wellness committee. Other members of the committee include, Ginger Frasca, Josephine Shabbott, Lynne Neff, who with the help of United Health Care and Oxford Health Plans put together the weeks' activities.

The hope is that the Project Manager Sumit Sajnani tests his grip strength

Central Office Wellness Week is just the first in a series of similar events in various facilities. Next on the list is Bridgeport C.C. in September, and then MacDougall/Walker C. I.

PREVENTING FUEL RELATED SMALL ENGINE PROBLEM'S

I have been hearing from a lot of people complaining of hard starting (or not starting) small engines (i.e. lawn mowers, chain saws, and out boards). Normally they get the "Did you store it properly" speech. After years of hearing this speech from me, they have finally caught on and for the most part are following the basic guidelines, which years ago would have been fine - change the oil, pull the spark plug, put some mystery oil in the cylinder, turn it over a few times, replace the plug and add stabilizes to the fuel to keep it from varnishing during storage.

However, with the fuel that is now available to us, there is another step that has been thrown in and I will tell you why. With the oxygenators that are being added to fuel today, like in the case of ethanol, it attracts water particles and creates separation from the gas when left alone for extended periods of time. Once separated in this nature the alcohol and water attacks the seals and seats in the carburetors of the equipment in question. At the same time that this is taking place the oxygenated fuel is eating away at any built up scale on the walls of the fuel tank causing it to release and plug fuel filters.

Remember all the things you had to do to in order to properly store a small engine for the winter? You can now add drain your fuel system and it wouldn't hurt to fog your carburetor with a little WD-40 or any other light lubricant to coat the surfaces to prevent any corrosion from residual oxygenators left hanging around.

So the list of things to do before storage should go like this: Drain fuel from gas tank, start and let run until the fuel is emptied from the fuel lines and carburetor, remove air cleaner (clean or replace), fog carburetor, replace air cleaner, change the oil, pull the spark plug, examine the plug for damage and if needed replace it, lightly oil the cylinder, replace the plug, turn the engine over a few times with the plug wire off to distribute the oil, replace the spark plug wire.

As I said at the beginning of the article these are only basic guide lines for the care and maintenance of small engines. Before storage you should refer to your owners manual for any specific requirements your equipment might need. Having done all this in the spring or fall when you go to use your equipment add fresh fuel and get to work instead of calling your local parts store for a rebuild kit.

This article was written by Plant Facilities Engineer I, Don Hallabeck. If you have any questions or comments, he can be reached at (203) 806-2666.

Be Sure to disconnect the sparkplug wire before working on any part of the lawnmower.

K-9 Unit to the Rescue

The Connecticut Department of Correction K-9 Unit is holding a T-shirt sale fundraiser to benefit Officer Jaime Rivera of the Connecticut Department of Correction K-9 Unit. Rivera, a 15 year veteran of the Department, has a wife and four children; their oldest son, Johnny Ray was born with a condition involving

Last year was a very trying time for the Rivera family, physically, emotionally and financially. Myra is unable to work because she had to leave her job in Connecticut to be with Johnny Ray in Pennsylvania. Jaime, who is the sole provider, had to stay in Connecticut to work so they could keep up with the mortgage and other bills. The expenses of running two households, keeping Alyssa in school and extensive traveling back and fourth are overbearing for a sole income.

Johnny Ray will be in Pennsylvania until his transplant and recovery, which means a lot of travel for the Rivera's, as well as the expense of living in two states. The Rivera family needs our help so they can concentrate on the most important thing, which is getting Johnny Ray home again.

All proceeds from the T-shirt sale fundraiser will go directly to the Rivera Family.

Officer Jaime Rivera and Jake

his major organs. Johnny Ray has undergone hundreds of surgeries including a four-organ transplant of his stomach, pancreas, liver and small intestine causing him to spend most of 2007 at the Children's Hospital in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. His mother Myra and sister Alyssa lived at the Ronald McDonald House in Pittsburgh to be with him and help with his recovery.

Meanwhile, Jaime remained in Connecticut, where he continued to work to support his family financially while traveling back and forth to Pittsburgh often to spend time with his family and to be near Johnny Ray during his recovery. In addition, Jaime was enrolled in the Connecticut State Police 127th Patrol Dog Training Troop, training a new patrol dog. Participation in that 14 week course limited Jaime's ability to be with his son to just a few weekend trips to Pittsburgh.

Johnny Ray improved to the point that in January 2008 he was allowed to return home to Connecticut. Recently, Johnny Ray's health has deteriorated and he has been re- admitted to the Children's Hospital in Pittsburgh. It has been determined that his body has rejected the organs and he requires the complete transplant again. Unfortunately, he also needs a kidney in addition to the other four organs. Once again Myra is living at the Ronald McDonald House in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania waiting with Johnny Ray for a donor while the people at the hospital keep him healthy enough for the transplant.
