Dear Members of the Water Utility Coordinating Committee,

I am writing to you today to urge you in maintaining our Connecticut water supply. Having clean, sustainable water is equal to life and without it, we would surely all die. As our climate continues to change and our resources are threatened, it is doubly important that we protect that which we have left. In this case, Connecticut's water supply. Having foresight when dealing with life and death matters, is an absolute necessity. Ignoring the clear signs that our environment is compromised and our water needs are becoming scare is a farce. We must not give away our water rights to private corporations for profit, when the people who live in this state are in need of what is rightfully theirs. We must protect our water for those of us living here now and for future generations. How can Connecticut even consider selling our water to companies for profit. We must hold on to our resources and protect them. There must be a forum for public comment and laws must be made which protect us, the citizens of the state of connecticut, from profiting companies. Don't forget that this is your country too and your children and their children need this water.

Thank you,

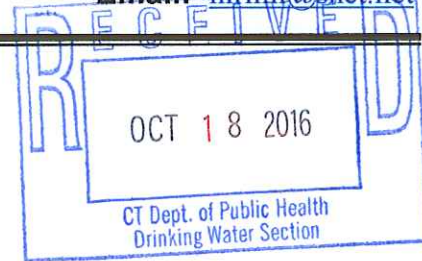

Dominique Horah-Nanez

Dear Sirs,

It has come to our attention that the statewide Water Planning Council and three regional Water Utility Coordinating Committees are in the process of developing a long-term, comprehensive water management for Connecticut.

Our water supply should never be taken for granted and should be protected for the use of the citizens of the state. If in drought condition the private citizens must limit the use of water, so should large private water users. In-state interests must take precedence over exploitation of the supplies for interstate profit.

Although business interests must be considered, vigilance and the law must prevent abuses, pollution and waste without making Connecticut inhospitable to employers.

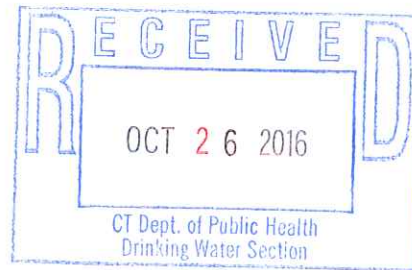

We trust that you will examine all considerations and do what is best for all the citizens of Connecticut.

Yours truly,

Nicole R. Michaud

Sir:

Our state public needs an abundance of clean drinking water. There should be a regional water planning strategy that prioritizes the public water over corporate interests. This is especially important during times of drought.

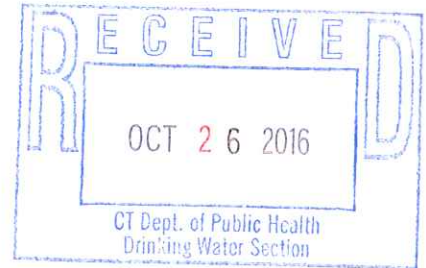

There is a need for environmental protection for the aquifers from chemicals used for fertilization of large tracts of land since these chemicals eventually end up in the water supplies. There has to be a compromise that allows for sustainable economic development while protecting our water.

There should be a requirement that mandates conservation measures for water utility companies and large private users during times of drought.

There should also be provisions that allow public comment during the planning phase and implementation of the water conservation strategy.

Respectfully yours

Dear Mr. Decker,

I believe Connecticut's clean water resources are essential to the existence of all living things on our planet. When the government bureaucracy gets in control local stakeholders eventually suffer. Our water resources are too precious to be controlled by opinions not on ground level.

Connecticut needs a regional water planning strategy that:

1. Prioritizes the public's need for clean drinking water supplies over corporate interests, especially during times of drought.
2. Prioritizes environmental protection for our water while allowing for sustainable economic development.
3. Provides ample opportunities for public comment during the plan's development and implementation.
4. Requires water conservation measures for water utilities and large private users.

Dear Mr. Decker,

As a concerned Connecticut citizen, conscientious state employee, and long-time tax payer, I was horrified to learn that no Connecticut state agency has the authority to limit water withdrawals from large private users. This could be completely disastrous for the public's access to a safe and protected water supply. It is a violation of the public's trust that the State of Connecticut government would not take adequate and far-reaching steps to preserve the public's access to continuing access to clean, safe and affordable drinking water.

It is a short-sighted public policy with potentially devastating consequences. Connecticut's clean and safe water supply belongs in the public's trust and should never be subject to unaccountable or non-limited private usage.

The State of Connecticut needs a regional water planning authority that can be a watchdog to prevent abuse of our water resources by ANY entity – private or public. This is especially critical during times of drought like we have experienced this summer.

I expect you in your capacity to support a comprehensive regional water planning strategy to keep our vital water assets and access in public control and will:

- Prioritize that Connecticut' citizens will have clean, safe affordable drinking water
- Prioritizes environmental protection of all water resources, particularly in times of drought or other scarcity, while allowing for sustainable economic development
- Provide for ample public commentary during plan's development and implementation
- Requires that all large water users, particularly water utilities and large private users, have water conservation measures imposed that are clearly defined and enforceable.

I will be following your support with interest and expect accountability from the Eastern WUCC.

In addition, I believe that CT needs a regional planning strategy that:

1. Prioritize the public's need for clean drinking water over corporate supplies
2. A plan which takes into account sustainable economic development while maintaining and protecting our water supply
3. Provides ample opportunity for public comment during the plan's development, implementation, and any changes to the plan afterwards
4. Requires water conversation measures for water utilities and large private users.

Please takes these comments into consideration and let me know if there is anything I can do to promote these ideas.

As an East Lynn resident, I support the causes of the CCE. They desire to help make our drinking water clean & safe to drink, this should involve the public residents as well as the various industries in the area. We All need to work together to make our environment a healthy and clean one.

This requires water conservation not only from private residences but from industry as well. This ~~req~~ would involve water and environmental protection from all appropriate resources.

This environmental protection while also respecting the opportunities for economic development should be a collaborative effort between the public and industry. The public should have a voice in the matter.

Kindly respect water conservation both large and small to help make our environment a safe and beautiful one.

- Prioritizes the public's need for clean drinking water over corporate interests, especially during times of drought. Seriously, like we really even need to ask;
- Prioritizes environmental protection for our water while allowing for sustainable economic development;
- Provides ample opportunities for public comment during the plan's development and implementation; and
- Requires water conservation measures for water utilities and large private users.

So, fix what is broken for the sake of us all. Stop taking clean water for granted and get a move on....and save us all. The whales will thank you.

For Eastern WUCC:

I am writing to inform you of my personal support for the drive to keep clean water sources in the public trust. In the current state of drought, it is very important now to raise awareness regarding the delicate nature of water conservation. I fully support the drive to establish a sound strategic plan regarding the environmental protection of our water supply with ample opportunity for public input and engagement. I also fully support the efforts to reign in wasteful and polluting behaviors practiced by corporate entities.

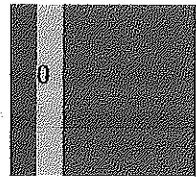

Sincerely,

Robert Shaw

Dear Mr. Congdon,

I am writing this letter to express the importance of managing our water resources and maintaining it in a public trust.

In addition, I believe that CT needs a regional planning strategy that:

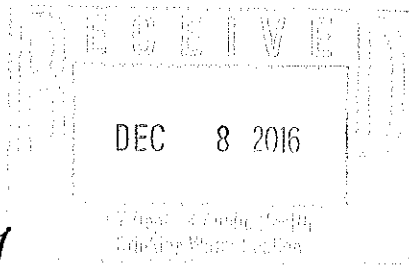

1. Prioritize the public's need for clean drinking water over corporate supplies
2. A plan which takes into account sustainable economic development while maintaining and protecting our water supply
3. Provides ample opportunity for public comment during the plan's development, implementation, and any changes to the plan afterwards
4. Requires water conservation measures for water utilities and large private users.

Please take these comments into consideration and let me know if there is anything I can do to promote these ideas.

Warm regards,

Thomas McLellan

To Bob Congdon,

As an East Lyme resident, I support the causes of the C&E. They desire to help make our drinking water safe to consume. They are asking the public to become involved with their voice. Both the public and industries need to work together to make our environment a healthy and clean one.

This requires water conservation not only from private residences but from industry as well. This should involve water and environmental protection from all appropriate resources.

This protection while also respecting development in the economy should be a collaborative effort between the public and industry. The public should have a voice in the matter.

Kindly respect water conservation both large and small to help make our environment a safe and beautiful one.

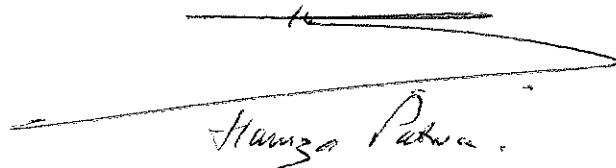

Thank you

Dear Mr. Bob Congdon

We feel that in the states water plan the public should have the ability to review and provide comments before the plan is voted on and implemented. Clean water and its availability is not a resource to be taken lightly considering the drought that we are in.

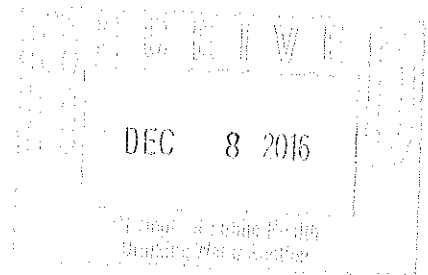

Thank you.

Dear Mr. Bob Congdon,

I believe CT's clean water resources are for the public of this and future generations, and should remain in the public trust.

CT needs a regional water planning strategy that:

Mr. Congdon

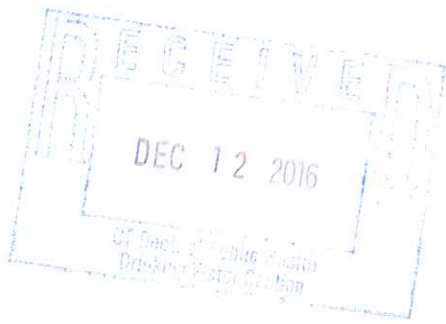

I am writing to support efforts of Citizens Campaign who are working to ensure safe drinking water for the citizens of Southeastern CT.

Keeping our water resources in public hands is one important step so there is no mishandling by over development or private, corporate special interests.

Sustaining clean water resources for the public, as well as for all of our environment is critical for long term quality of life in our region and our state. As global warming impact becomes a reality my fear is that there will be a scarcity of water, evidenced by our current drought situation. Ensuring that there is enough clean water to support the public as well as industry must be carefully managed + planned. Implementing reasonable water conservation measures is crucial and it takes courage to make hard decisions but that's what's needed now. I hope I can count on you to make a plan that fairly protects our water supply for tomorrow and our long term future.

Thank you for your support. Kathryn Leindecker
